Corporate Training

Today it is already clear- we do not need “surface polish” and “great” achievements; we need laborious “dirty” long work with real persons- managers and specialists of concrete enterprises. It is necessary to organize work in the sphere of education, discussion and solution of complex problems appearing in their working practice. In this case it is impossible to avoid staff reduction or its professional retraining, optimization of use of technological resources, legalization of new relations in the team.

This problem cannot be solved on impulse, by enormous financial investments, attraction of “super-consultants”. Managers should completely change their philosophy and attitude to work; step-by-step learning of modern methods and ways of managing a company as a single developing system is needed.

Investments in the form of new technique, equipments, and technologies do not lead to a proper result because companies’ staff is not ready to use the best world achievements.

In this connection the role of managerial team of every company increases. It should formulate the strategy of business development, work out and realize the program of a company’s restructuring that will be the base for success on the world market, and do this independently, using the best world achievements.
